No. 50 30 April 2026

Retail Prices Index

The Retail Prices Index ('Index') for the quarter ended 31 March 2026 has now been completed.

The Index has dropped by 0.2% to 123.379. The change in the Index over the year to 31 March 2026 has been 1.1%.

Date	Index	Quarterly % Increase/ Decrease	Annual % Increase/ Decrease
31.03.2025	125.059	0.8%	0.7%
30.06.2025	125.181	0.1%	0.3%
30.09.2025	126.349	0.9%	2.7%
31.12.2025	126.626	0.2%	2.1%
31.03.2026	123.379	-0.2%	1.1%

Quarterly change: The fuel prices for quarter 1 (collected in March 2026) do not reflect the geopolitical turmoil in the Middle East and the consequent increase in fuel prices seen in April. As such, the fuel and power category provided the main deflationary influence on the Index in the first three months of the year. Communication experienced an important drop due to the introduction of further unlimited broadband packages by Sure. The housing category also witnessed a drop in the quarter due to a drop in the price of timber.

Annual change: Further drops in fuel witnessed in the first quarter of 2026 kept annual inflation low, with the fuel and power category representing the biggest deflationary contributor over the 12-month period. Food and non-alcoholic beverages were the biggest contributor to inflation over the year, likely reflecting the relatively high inflation rates in the United Kingdom in 2025. Housing was an important driver of inflation in the year, largely due to the increase in Falkland Islands Government rents introduced in 2025.

Outlook: The considerable increase in the diesel price in April, as well as any possible increases in kerosene later on in the year, will likely have a significant inflationary impact in the next two to three quarters. Increases in the cost of global shipping and manufacturing are likely to further drive inflation across the Index this year, albeit to a lesser extent.
